O.C. stores may have sold recalled meat 14 O.C. stores sold recalled products: Is yours one?

By JENNIFER MUIR

If you shop in the supermarkets listed below, you may have bought meat that's been recalled. The USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service believes these stores received beef and pork products that have been recalled by Paisano Meat Inc. and included them on a list of stores published online.

The Gardena-based meat company on Friday recalled approximately 350,000 pounds of beef and pork products because they may contain undeclared sulfites, which can be harmful to people who are sensitive to sulfites.

The list may not include all stores that have received products, and USDA concedes some may not have actually received the products, so it's important for consumers to check the product identification information on any Paisano Meat products in your refrigerator or freezer.
